Disenchanted by politics

Jones quits state job

JEFFERSON CITY — Former Sedalian Ron Jones, 32, submitted his resignation as deputy director of the State Department of Agriculture Aug. 30, effective as of last Thursday, it was learned Monday.

Jones, who assumed his position July 1 after serving as State Fair secretary since February, 1973, said Tuesday he resigned "because I was not pleased and satisfied, with certain things going on in state government."

Although it was initially reported that he resigned last Thursday, Jones Tuesday said he informally submitted his resignation to Agriculture Director James Boillot Aug. 30.

Asked to what extent the Ozark Music Festival, and the resultant State Senate Committee investigation and the Pettis County grand jury probe, affected his decision, Jones said these actions "merely served to hasten a decision I had more or less made much earlier.

"I was pretty much disposed to leaving state government as early as last January and February, when I made some preliminary contacts in the business world," he continued. "I don't enjoy politics. I believe there is an insensitivity involved in politics. I'm basically an idealistic person and I soon found out that state government is not too good a place for an idealist. I've come under a lot of fire recently and that's hurt me in a sense."

Ron Jones

Jones cited his activities in securing funds for the Fair from the House and Senate appropriation committees "as a case in point."

"I saved $140,000 during my first year at the Fair and then, when I went back the following year, they cut back about $140,000 from my request for this year. At first I thought that was an interesting coincidence, but they later told me it was no coincidence at all. I suspected it all along, of course, but just to hear them say it, did something to me."

Politics, Jones said, "seems to sometimes bring out the worst in people. I have listened to much of the testimony regarding the festival and, in listening, a lot of it tends to sound self-serving in my opinion ... It seems that politics is a game with a lot of people, and I don't feel comfortable playing it myself."

Referring to the Ozark festival, Jones, who is active in the local Latter Day Saints Church, said "it just did something to me to see everything I've ever worked for and believed in to be trampled to bits that weekend. In 1973, I was branded a conservative and religious fanatic because I outlawed booze at the Fair press party. This year, they called me an ultra-liberal drug pusher. I just don't know."

Jones said he "stayed on through the festival because I felt it my responsibility. If I had resigned before the festival, it might have looked like I was leaving a sinking ship."

Jones, who was Pettis County campaign manager for Gov. Christopher Bond in 1972, emphasized that his disillusionment with politics did not extend to dissatisfaction with Bond's administration itself.

"I'm extremely pleased with what Gov.

Smoke clouds illegal dump

A cloud of black smoke rose from behind 1408 North Ohio Tuesday morning as Henry Harker, 316 East Morgan, burned rubber tractor tires in order to get the metal rims. Fire Chief Willis Jabas arrived at the scene about 11:25 a.m. and told Harker that he would have to let the fire die down because of a city ordinance against such open burning. Jabas also found that the property had been used as an illegal trash dump. He said that he would notify the city sanitation officer so that he could notify the property owner the dump would have to be closed.

New York contest close

WASHINGTON (AP) — A close contest over the Democratic nomination for governor in New York attracted the greatest national attention among primary elections in 13 states and District of Columbia today.

Candidates sought their party's designation to run for eight U.S. Senate seats and nine other governorships. But with most big name candidates either unopposed for renomination or facing token opposition, there was little excitement over the largest schedule of elections in any one day so far during this mid-term election year.

Residents of the nation's capital were nominating a mayor for the first time in more than a century with Democratic nomination considered as good as election.

Elections also were being held in Arizona, Connecticut, Colorado, Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont and Wisconsin.

In New York, U.S. Rep. Hugh L. Carey, from Brooklyn, and Howard J. Samuels, the man who set up New York City's legalized operation for betting on horse races away from the track, sought the Democratic nomination for governor. The winner of this close race is regarded as having the best chance of winning the governorship of any Democrat in the 16 years since Nelson A. Rockefeller first won the office.

The Republican opponent in the Nov. 5 general election is likely to be incumbent Malcolm Wilson, who is expected to win the GOP nomination for his first campaign for the office. He was elevated from the lieutenant governorship when Rockefeller resigned last December.

All five incumbent senators seeking new terms are favored to win. They are Democrats Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin and Republicans Peter H. Dominick of Colorado, Charles McC. Mathias Jr., of Maryland, Jacob K. Javits of New York and Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona.

Senate primaries also pick nominees for the seats of retiring Sens. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., George D. Aiken, R-Vt., and Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla.

Other incumbent governors seeking renomination and expected to win it include Democrats Reubin Askew of Florida, Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin, Wendell P. Anderson of Minnesota and Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont, and Republicans Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts, John Vanderhoof of Colorado and Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire.

In Arizona, Gov. John R. Williams, a Republican, is retiring, and the frontrunners for the GOP nomination for his job are former Phoenix Mayor John Driggs and former State Corporation Commissioner Russell Williams. Heading a four-man Democratic field is Raul Castro, former U.S. ambassador to Bolivia who lost a close race to Williams in 1970.

Mutnick pledges to continue

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Socialist Workers Party candidate Barbara Mutnick has pledged that she will continue her campaign for the U.S. Senate even if the Missouri Supreme Court refuses to order her name placed on the November ballot.

"We hope the Missouri Supreme Court will now see fit to uphold the democratic rights of small political parties," she said Monday in a statement shortly after attorney's argued her challenge of Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick's contention that nominating petition signers must be registered voters.

"No matter what the Supreme Court decides," Mrs. Mutnick added, however, "I will continue my campaign for the U.S. Senate and will continue to present the socialist alternative to the voters of Missouri. I will urge voters to write my name in on the ballot on Nov. 5."

While the arguments before the seven-member high court were directed at the legal issue of petition signers being required to be registered voters, Mrs. Mutnick and her supporters have also accused Kirkpatrick's office of sloppy and careless work in checking the petition signatures.

That charge has prompted the secretary of state's office to draft proposed legislation for introduction in January that would add to the current nominating petition form, which is established by law, a block for the printed or typed name of the signer. Currently, the written signature is the only name placed on nominating petitions.

The Socialist Workers Party claimed that many valid names on its petitions were not counted, but Henry Koch, who supervised the validation operation, said some of the signatures were difficult to read, especially with no printed name to check them against.

During the Supreme Court arguments, party attorney Robert Sears claimed the registration requirement was not intended to be used for another election process activity except voting, while C. B. Burnes, representing Kirkpatrick's office, contended that the 1973 Statewide Voter Registration Law made registration the final requirement for a person to be a qualified voter and to participate in all facets of the electroal process.

"We believe the concept of voter is broader than just pulling the lever on a voting machine," Burnes said. "The petition process is also included in the concept of voter. Signing petitions is just as much a part of the electoral process as primary balloting."

The high scourt arguments came less than two months after the court ruled 6-1 that signers of initiative and referendum petitions must be registered voters.

For all involved

More Watergate pardons possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced through a spokesman today that the possibility of pardons for everyone convicted or accused of crimes in the Watergate scandals "is now under study."

The surprise announcement came from Acting White House Press Secretary John W. Hushen, who said Ford had authorized the statement. "I can give you no further guidance," Hushen told a White House briefing.

All told, 48 individuals have now been accused of crimes related to the series of cases broadly called Watergate, and 39 of them have pleaded guilty or have been convicted by juries.

In addition, 14 corporations have pleaded guilty to violations of campaign finance laws. All were sentenced to fines.

Hushen made clear that possible pardons were being considered for those already convicted of Watergate-related crimes as well as those who face trial in the future.

The disclosure came two days after President Ford announced an unconditional pardon for former President Richard M. Nixon. White House Counsel Philip Buchen had said Sunday that no thought had been given to a broader pardon covering others in the case.

Hushen said he did not know whether the study was launched prior to the Nixon pardon.

"I think those factors have been taken into account," he replied, adding that the initiation ofa study did not mean pardons would be granted.

Asked if he felt the scheduled Sept. 30 trial of six key Watergate defendants could go forward in the wake of the White House announcement, Hushen said, "I believe it can."

In first disclosing the study, Hushen gave no indication of who had authorized the statement. Later, in response to a question, he said, "The President authorized me to make that."

There was no immediate reaction from the office of Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

A spokesman for the office of U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica said no comment was expected from the judge.

Sirica presided over the trial of the original seven Watergate break-in defendants and is scheduled to try six former Nixon White House, administration and campaign aides in the Watergate cover-up case starting Sept. 30. Nixon was named by a federal grand jury as an unindicted co-conspirator in the cover-up case.

Questioned at the news briefing about Ford's motivation for pardoning Nixon, Hushen said he could not say what importance the President had attached to the question of Nixon's physical and emotional health because he could not put himself inside Ford's "thinking processes."

Pardon criticism mounts

Amnesty is sidetracked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pardon for former President Richard M. Nixon has brought President Ford mounting criticism and has sidetracked a Vietnam amnesty plan he was to have announced today.

Ford missed his own deadline for announcing terms of conditional amnesty for Vietnam-era deserters and draft evaders because he was focusing attention on Nixon's pardon, aides said.

Now, no time is set for Ford's amnesty decision affecting some 50,000 men.

The President wants more time to consider the complex questions, said Deputy Press Secretary John W. Hushen.

Several advocates of amnesty felt Ford's postponing his decision after the Nixon pardon might lead to a broader, less conditional program for the Vietnam group.

But, Hushen emphasized that Ford has not changed his view that, unlike the "full, free and absolute" pardon he gave Nixon, Vietnam offenders must be judged case-by-case, category-by-category.

Public reaction, meanwhile, was mounting in the first 48 hours after Ford's surprise pardon announcement on Sunday.

The President got a chorus of boos, amid applause, from a crowd of about 500 outside a Pittsburgh hotel where he made a speech Monday morning. There were chants of "no more cover up," and "prosecute Nixon," and demonstrators protesting the Nixon pardon held signs with such comments as: "The honey noon is over," "Justice Died," and "Why not pardon all?"

The White House switchboard continued to be jammed with calls throughout Monday. The first 3,000 calls Sunday night ran 2 to 1 against Ford's decision, a White House spokesman reported.

By Monday night, however, the telephone sentiment had switched to 50-50, the spokesman said.

But, there was overwhelming criticism in telegrams and mailgrams that Western Union estimated would total some 75,000 messages by Monday night. They were running 7 to 1 against Ford's pardon.

In Nixon's home state, the House of Delegates of the California Bar voted 347 to 169 in favor of a resolution which said Ford's action "violates the principle that all persons stand equal before the law and presents a substantial threat that the confidence of our citizens in the American system of justice will be undermined."

Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski said of pardon: "This is a matter that was decided upon by the President on his authority under the Constitution. It was something I didn't participate in."

But, one of his chief aides, Philip A. Lacovara, submitted his resignation because he said Ford's pardon of Nixon "disposes of the question" of the former President's legal status.

Lacovara's was the second resignation stemming from the pardon.

Police thwart revolt attempt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police stormed a white settlers' rebel stronghold at the radio station in Lourenco Marques, the capital of Mozambique, today and government spokesmen announced a threeday attempt to seize power in the Portuguese southeast African colony was over.

The whereabouts of the rebel leaders was not immediately known. They had threatened to proclaim a "free Mozambique" in defiance of an agreement between Portugal and the black guerrilla movement, Frelimo, to give Mozambique independence next June. The government spokesman said the radio station was the only "active center of resistance" and once it had been occupied the revolt quickly collapsed.

The radio broadcast appeals to the white crowds in the streets to disperse and return to their homes. Earlier, the government said it had agreed to a 48-hour truce with the white rebels after meetings with two envoys from the Lisbon government. There was no indication how the "truce" was broken but government sources said the rebel movement "disintegrated" without violence.

President Antonio de Spinola signed documents in a ceremony in Lisbon today at the Belem presidential palace formally recognizing the independence of Guinea Bissau, the first of Portugal's African territories to achieve complete sovereignty.

The ceremony, broadcast by Portuguese radio and television networks, brought to an end 530 years of Portuguese colonial rule in the swampy territory near the tip of the West African bulge.

The Portuguese army fought a 12-year war against a well-organized guerrilla movement which overran two-thirds of the colony. Following secret negotiations in London and Algiers, an independence agreement was signed in Algiers on Aug. 26 granting Portuguese Guinea independence but providing for extensive economic, technical and cultural cooperation between Portugal and the new state.

The rebels took over the radio station, the airport and other installations in Lourenco Marques on Saturday in an attempt to keep guerrilla leader Samora Machel and his followers from taking power in the southeast African colony.

Machel vowed that the rebellious settlers would be "quickly neutralized and annihilated" by his forces and the Portuguese army.

Sugar cane crop damage is surveyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar cane losses inflicted by Hurricane Carmen may further increase record-high consumer sugar prices, government experts say.

The Department of Agriculture has launched a special survey of crop damage in Louisiana, which bore the brunt of the storm. Initial loss estimates ranged up to 75 per cent of the crop.

Don Paarlberg, the department's director of economics, said the storm losses could produce a substantial further impact on sugar prices, depending on the extent of the damage. Sugar prices already have soared this year because production has not kept pace with world demand.

A five-pound bag of sugar that cost American shoppers 85 cents last January costs around $2 today.

Although the Louisiana and Florida cane-growing area had been expected to produce less than 1.8 million tons of the 12.5 million tons of raw sugar needed by U.S. refineries this year, an expected decline in sugar production from beet sources magnifies the importance of the cane-growing region hit by the hurricane.

Last month the department estimated sugar cane production for the year would increase four per cent while, at the same time, beet production was expected to drop eight per cent.

Thus, the Louisiana losses would reduce the expected rise in cane production, causing prices to rise further and providing the opponents of sugar import quotas with further arguments to suspend the restrictions.

The possibility of quota suspension was raised several weeks ago by Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, and the Louisiana storm may speed a decision on whether to open the U.S. door to more foreign sugar.

Attorneys deny any conflict of interest

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A Kansas City law firm who has aided Delton Houtchens during a federal grand jury investigation of former Gov. Warren Hearnes' administration has hired a former assistant U.S. Attorney who worked on the case, according to a copywrited story in today's editions of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The newspaper said Patrick E. Eldrige has joined the law firm of Duncan and Russell.

Charges refiled in Circuit Court

Charges against Kenneth Joe Wasson for disobeying the orders of a Highway Patrolman, were dismissed in Magistrate Court Tuesday. The charges were then refiled in Circuit Court. Wasson is the president of Pettis County Ambulance Inc.

Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming was told by Wasson's attorney that a Magistrate Court conviction would be appealed to Circuit Court. "It wouldn't make any sense to try the case twice," Fleming said. "This way we just have to try it once."

Wasson was charged on July 25 by the Highway Patrol for allegedly failing to obey a stop signal from a Patrolman at an accident scene four miles east of Smithton on Highway 50 in which four persons were hurt.

A second ambulance owner, F. H. Rush, was also at the scene. Rush was fined $50 for careless and imprudent driving in Magistrate County Court on Aug. 15. Rush's ambulance was passing Wasson's and clipped it in the process, Wasson charged.

Coins, currency taken from home

Mary Ann Smith, 507 State Fair Blvd., reported to police Monday that her home was broken into sometime between 8 a.m. and noon Monday and that $83 in coins and currency she had collected were taken. $130 damage was done to two screen doors and a storm window. Entry to the house was gained through a bedroom window.

Police also reported that Donald E. Anderson, 3136 West 10th, reported that a battery, valued at $50, was stolen from his truck parked at the Plaza West Apartments, 3136 West Tenth.

Anderson told police that the battery cables, valued at $15, were cut by the thieves.

Nixon plans to resign from the bar

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's lawyer says the former president is ready to write an end to 35 years as an attorney.

Nixon's lawyer, Dean Butler of Los Angeles, told newsmen on Monday that Nixon would resign soon from the California bar, which is gathering evidence on Nixon's role in Watergate for possible disciplinary action.

Nixon is also a member of the New York bar, and Butler said Nixon also plans to resign from that organization.

Nixon's decision probably means the California bar will not pursue its investigation of the former president. Bar President Seth Hufstedler said the bar seldom recommends that the state Supreme Court reject a resignation.

Butler's announcement came two hours before the California bar's House of Delegates overwhelmingly condemned President Ford's pardon of Nixon for crimes he may have committed in the White House.

Butler denied that Nixon's pending action is designed to avoid disbarment or suspension from the practice of law in California.

"It is a decision he made some time ago — that he would not engage in the practice of law," Butler told newsmen.

Butler did not say when the resignations would be submitted, but Hufstedler said Nixon was preparing a resignation from the California bar and "it would be submitted promptly."

Delegates to the California bar's annual convention approved, 347 to 169, a resolution condemning the pardon announced by Ford on Sunday.

It said in part, "This action violates the principle that all persons stand equal before the law and presents a substantial threat that the confidence of our citizens in the American system of justice will be undermined."

The bar's board of governors refused to allow delegates to vote on a portion of the resolution which urged that the investigation of Nixon continue.

Nixon spent Monday at the Palm Springs estate of Walter H. Annenberg, U.S. ambassador to Britain. The former president's valet said Nixon was in good sprits and was working on his papers.

Jones quits

Bond and his staff have been able to accomplish during the past two years," he said. "I just felt that, personally, I wanted to return to private business."

Jones said he is enrolled at Central Methodist College, Fayette, and will complete requirements in December for a degree in counseling psychology. He will also work two days a week in Kansas City at the Latter Day Saints Church social service agency, an organization involved in church family counseling and adoption procedures. Jones said he will assume a full-time post with the agency next year.

State Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, chairman of the State Senate committee investigating the music festival, Tuesday said, "Mr. Jones was involved in negotiating the contract for the (Ozark) festival and I presume his resignation is an outgrowth of that mistake." Webster declined further comment pending the release, in approximately two weeks, of the committee's official report.

Boillot Tuesday said, "I've always had a lot of confidence in Ron for as long as I've known him. I had to have some very deep and sincere feelings of regret when he submitted his resignation."

The music festival, Boillot said, "I'm sure certainly did have something to do with Ron's decision. I know his absence will leave a tremendous void that will be extremely difficult to fill."

Boillot declined to say when Jones' successor would be named.

Grand jury hears more from Jones

The Pettis County Grand Jury met again Tuesday morning and Ron Jones, who has resigned as deputy director of agriculture, was at the session. Jones entered the jury room after a late morning break at 11 a.m.

The jury's main duty is to investigate the Ozark Music Festival held here in July. Jones and other state officials recently drew criticism from a Missouri Senate committee investigating the lease negotiations of the fairgrounds for the rock concert, which attracted more than 100,000 persons.

No other witnesses appeared before the grand jury Tuesday morning.

Grand jury sessions are held behind closed doors and it was not known what Jones told the jurors.

Charges expected in bank robbery

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Federal authorities were expected to file bank robbery charges here today against a man arrested in connection with a Joplin, Mo., bank holdup Monday.

The suspect was arrested near Galena, Kan., six miles west of Joplin, about 40 minutes after the robbery at the First National Bank, Joplin.

More than $12,000 was taken in the robbery, police said.

Authorities said the money and a revolver were recovered from the suspect's car.

State party committees meet today

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's Republican and Democratic state committees met today to name new chairmen and draft party platforms.

In addition, the Democrats will select eight of the 60 state committee members to join the delegation for the National Democratic Party's midterm convention in Kansas City Dec. 6-8.

The state chairman and vice chairwoman will be among the eight, according to the national party's rules.

Thrty-four delegates from the congressional districts have been selected, and will joint the 11 Democratic congressmen and senators from Missouri to make up the 53-member delegation to Kansas City.

On the Republican side, Lowell McCuskey, 44, prosecuting attorney of Osage County, was expected to succeed Hannibal lawyer Albert Rendlen as state GOP chairman.

Rendlen has been named a state appeals court judge. Rendlen served two years as chairman.

James E. Spain, 39, a southeast Missouri lawyer, former legislator and unsuccessful candiate for attorney general in 1972, was expected to succeed David Donnelly of Lebanon, who is giving up the chairmanship after serving two years. Spain was the choice of Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo.

The Democratic group's executive committee was faced with a delegate selection battle in the 2nd Congressional District, where the Democratic chairman of the district, Lewis C. Green, threw out the all-male slate and replaced them with three women and a man.

The top vote getters for the Kansas City convention were state Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann; James Anderson, Louis Solari and Joseph A. Randazzo.

Green said over half of those of voting age in the 2nd District are women, according to U.S. Department of Commerce figures. The only fair remedy, he said, would be to promote the next highest vote getters.

Watergate prosecution member quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The third-ranking member of the Watergate prosecution force has resigned because of the pardon granted former President Richard M. Nixon.

"I would not have resigned today if my responsibility hadn't been lightened," 31-year-old Philip A. Lacovara said in an interview on Monday. "My responsibilities in the past included developing legal and policy arguments concerning the role of the President under the law and the role of the former President under the law.

"Sunday's action by President Ford disposes of the question."

Lacovara, counsel to Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, said he did not wish to go beyond that for fear that it might interfere with a fair trial for the Watergate cover-up defendants.

"I'm not saying I'm leaving because of a disagreement," Lacovara said. "It's because my own responsibilities take on a different complexion."

Lacovara had a part in all investigations conducted by Jaworski's office and was in charge of appeals, arguing part of the government's Watergate tape case before the Supreme Court.

Unhappiness with President Ford's announcement that he was absolving the former President of guilt for any federal crimes he may have committed while in office was voiced by the foreman of the grand jury that named Nixon an unindicted coconspirator in the cover-up case.

Vladimir N. Pregelj said that "the due process of law should have taken its course," and added "if the grand jury has any options of its own, we may have to discuss them and see what could be done."

Pregelj said the jurors he has talked with expressed "disappointment, dismay and outrage" at the blanket pardon. But he said that if any legal action is taken despite the pardon it would have to be done by Jaworski.

Probation request is denied

COLUMBIA — Following denial of probation in Boone County Circuit Court here Monday, Adam Fischer, attorney for convicted murderer Kim Eugene Phillips, said the decision would be appealed.

Phillips, 22, a former Whiteman AFB airman, was convicted by a Boone County Circuit Court jury April 23 and sentenced to a 50-year term in the penitentiary for the strangulation death of Mrs. Karen Jones, 16, of Sedalia, on Aug. 13, 1973.

Mrs. Jones was found dead in her east side Sedalia apartment by her landlord. Besides being strangled, she was stabbed several times.

Phillips' trial was moved to Boone County on a change of venue from Pettis County.

Tuesday Fischer said Phillips remains in the Boone County jail and that he has 15 days to raise a $50,000 appeal bond. The Kansas City Appellate Court will hear the appeal case, but Fischer said this might involve a wait of three to four months.

On Monday, Boone County Circuit Court Judge Frank Conley cited protection of society and the jury's wishes as reasons for denying Phillips the probation request.

Should Phillips fail to raise the $50,000 appeal bond, he will be remanded to the custody of the State Department of Corrections on Sept. 24. Pettis County Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming said he originally recommended that the appeal bond be set at $100,000.

Will discuss bicentennial plans for city

Efforts to secure Sedalia's status as a "bicentennial city" are expected to be advanced Thursday at a meeting between Mayor Jerry Jones and Chamber of Commerce executive manager Larry Melton, it was announced Tuesday.

Melton said he requested the meeting with Jones "to discuss ways in which the Chamber and city officials can cooperate in promoting this effort."

At their July meeting, the Chamber executive board was addressed by Ken White, executive secretary of the Missouri American Revolution Bicentennial Commission. White informed the group that, in order to be approved as a bicentennial city, a community must present a planned program of commemorative activities.

The projects, White explained, should possess enduring value (monuments, museums, planting programs, etc.) and demonstrate as much community-wide involvement as possible.

Melton, who also served as coordinator of the Scott Joplin Ragtime Festival here this summer, had earlier suggested the establishment of a Joplin museum as an appropriate project. Tuesday, Melton indicated he believed the museum concept could be expanded to include other aspects of Sedalia's history.

Further action on this matter is expected to be taken at the next Chamber executive board meeting Sept. 17, Melton said.

Officials to continue blaze probe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — State and local fire officials planned to return early today to the ruins of a boarding home for elderly women where seven persons perished in a blaze early Monday.

Asst. Fire Chief Earl Swanson said the "travel of burn and the intensity of burn around the wood" have led the investigators to conclude the fire began in the basement.

However, the cause of the blaze remained a mystery Monday night and Swanson said it may take two or three days of intensive study to make a determination about the cause.

Herbert Domke, Missouri health director, said a representative of the Missouri Health Division met three weeks ago with operators of the home and advised them they were not complying with state law.

Another Division of Health spokesman said applications for a state license had been sent to the home, but it had not been granted a license.

The state's boarding home law requires boarding houses with three or more patients over 60 to be licensed by the state.

Swanson said the upper floors of the home were divided by partitions which give off a highly inflammable vapor.

When firemen arrived shortly after midnight, said Fire Chief Cloyd Campbell, they encountered a "roaring inferno."

Killed were Evelyn Mason, 83; Ruby Reed, 90; Mary Jane Letts, 92; Helena VanDeventer, whose age was unknown; Pansy Hudson, 80; Mrs. Willard Cramer, 74, and Randy Burton, 11.

The boy was the son of Dorothy Schildknecht, 40, who operated the home with her husband, William.

Five persons survived the fire, including the couple.

Chief Campbell said the home was not subject to more stringent fire codes because of its classification as a boarding home, rather than a nursing home. "That's one thing that needs to be rectified in the state of Missouri," Campbell said.

The home did not have a fire alarm system.

Richard A. Heider, Buchanan County prosecuting attorney, said his office was also conducting an investigation.

Heider said he did not know of the existence of the Schildknecht home before the fire.

John W. Rick, president of the Missouri Nursing Home Association, said the association plans to investigate the fire "in an attempt to eliminate this type of tragic disaster in the future."

Spend $46,000 for new diesel tractor

The Pettis County Court has awarded a contract for a new tractor to the Dean Machinery Co., 1620 West Main, which bid $46,000 Tuesday morning for the 140-horse power diesel vehicle.

The Dean company gave the county $13,930 in trade for its 1959 tractor. The list price of the new tractor if $59,930.00.

The only other bid presented to the county court was for an International tractor from Liberty-Roland Machinery Co. Including the trade-in on the old tractor, the International tractor would have cost $49,940.

Presiding Judge Harry Walch recently visited the Caterpiller plant in Peoria, Ill., to examine road equipment there and said Tuesday's action was a good buy for the county.

Durian

Thailand's precious fruit with the pungent smell

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

NONTHABURI, Thailand (AP) — Each year before the big rains a peculiar aroma haunts the byways and marketplaces of Thailand, and people flock to buy Durian, the world's most precious and pungent fruit.

It's nothing at this time of year for a working man to plunk down a week's wages for one big green dragon's egg with a rind like a dinosaur and a smell like the Great Dismal Swamp.

The fragrance of Durian allows no indifference: you love it or you leave the room.

The rich brimstone musk, whispering of depravity and month-old eggs, is banned from hotels and airplanes, has broken up marriages and is a good way to get an elevator to yourself at rush hour.

But still men will fight and steal and travel miles for this polecat of the orchard. Durian is to fruit what limburger is to cheese and pornography to literature. Once seduced the addict sinks without shame into lush and expensive gluttony.

A single prime Durian can fetch up to 50 U.S. dollars in Bangkok and confer status on its owner with the sweet stench of success.

The parsimonious cruise the narrow roads of this suburban province, noses alert for a bargain. For three months a year Nonthaburi is stinking rich with Durian.

Here barbed wire, sharp bamboo stakes and hedges of red hibiscus gird Durian orchards that earn their owners an average 25 U.S. dollars a tree.

"We keep a guard out all night during the season but the thieves come in trucks and we lose some anyway," says farmer Pien Hinyu, whose crop this year should bring in 15,000 U.S. dollars — about 75 times the national average income.

"We eat them every day ourselves, and those we can't sell we give to friends before they go bad," he says. "The money isn't as important as the enjoyment."

In the countryside a small Durian sells for as little as $1 at the little roadside stands where the proprietor will save you the lacerating task of splitting the spiny husk and serve you a cracked cup of jasmine water to wash down your investment.

The first look inside a Durian is dismaying, rather like opening a coconut and finding a pancreas. But those who can survive the smell and the appearance learn first-hand the flavor that Western writers for centuries have burst their metaphors trying to describe.

Since words cannot hope to capture that essence, here is a recipe — untested — for do-it-yourself Durian:

3 bananas
2 egg yolks
1 pinch powdered sulfur
3 tablespoons limburger cheese
1 clove garlic, mashed
¼ lb. cream cheese for body
1 shoelace for texture.

Blend ingredients into a custard, mold around a horse chestnut and serve with apprehension.

Playpen holes are mesh mess

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peve is with string that often sticks out from buttons on ready-made clothes, ravels at a mere touch and then a button is lost.

Also I wish the manufacturers of containers with caps (like spray cans) would make the tops large enough to slip over the bottom of the can while using the product. Would save looking for and losing a lot of misplaced tops. — HELEN.

DEAR POLLY — I hope I have help for Gerrie who shrunk her Italian hand knit sweater by washing it in the washer. I had the same problem. The following was given me by a friend but not until after I had disposed of the ruined sweater. Add one cup white vinegar to a gallon of water — enough to cover the sweater. Bring to a boil and continue to boil for a little while. Let sweater cool in that water and then wash as usual. I also suggest that Ferne put vinegar in her rinse water to keep lint from clinging to her clothes. — MRS. M.F.E.

DEAR GIRLS — If a sweater is already ruined I would give Mrs. M.F.E.'s Pointer a try and evidently things could not get worse. I could not verify this suggestion, as Mrs. M.F.E. had not, and had nothing in that condition to try it on but if there is nothing to lose there might be a chance of some gain. — POLLY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I borrowed a wide mesh playpen and my cat tore several holes in it. Is there some way I could mend this? The only thing I could think of is to crochet a chain stitch and then crochet it into the broken ends. Please help me. — ALMA.

"WE'RE ON THE ENERGY TEAM!"

At our plant we're saving energy several ways. A lot of us are car-pooling. We keep lights turned off when they're not really needed. We adjust the air conditioning and the heat a few degrees. And we're saving fuel oil with better insulation on the hot water pipes.

We're getting more customers lately for tuneup jobs. I think people are doing everything they can to use less gasoline. Most of them are driving less, driving slower, keeping engines tuned, buying smaller cars, using the air conditioning less. And oil companies are drilling hundreds more wells this year than last in an effort to close the gap between energy supplies and energy needs.

Meanwhile there's still a big job to do—let's keep working together

Home decorating takes on informal approach

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For most people formal decorating has gone the way of "keeping up with the Joneses." People don't do it any more. A casual approach — using things you like and placing them where you want them will replace rigid rules in decorating this fall. People won't decorate with the idea that "everybody's doing it," say interior designers.

The nondecorated look isn't easy to pull off, as talented decorators admit.

"It is more difficult to achieve than the decorated look" in the opinion of well-known interior designer Michael Greer. "One should not be aware that a house has been decorated. My own function must be to help my clients assemble things they want to live with in such a way that the home does not look decorated."

The new look in decorating has evolved from collecting, says Leona Kahn, another New York designer.

"Today everyone is a collector. I never thought I would see French furniture on the wane, but the salon style as we have known it is not popular today. Young people no longer care whether a chair is period or not or whether it goes with a rug or other furniture, but even they look at antiques as a possible investment."

Patricia Harvey observed that "we are all more interested in attractive interiors that allow for relaxation and comfort rather than 'museum' type living." Her own home in Manhattan's Murray Hill section follows that precept with its bright cheerful colors and a furniture mix.

"I avoid matching and perfect balances. The idea should be to put a room together without calling attention to the techniques through which it has been done," she emphasized. "Opulence is out because people do not wish to be identified with show-offs."

One of New Jersey's talented interior designers, Alvin Greenbaum, has found that people have sacrificed architectural details and other amenities because woodworkers and electricians are more costly.

Awareness in decorating

The uncoordinated and nondecorated look is the approach for fall decorating. Although it is a free and casual approach, as shown in the above picture, it is often more difficult to achieve than the decorated look, one interior designer said. (AP)

"They are seeking more practical solutions such as the casual look in home furnishings. The day of creating red mats for pictures in a room with red walls is past," he explained. "Fall decorating will be more casual, relaxed and informal. There will be no obvious coordination."

Greenbaum encourages collecting, too, believing there are long-range benefits in buying good things from the outset, and he travels a great deal in search of collectibles.

New York interior designer Martha House doesn't "purposefully set out to achieve a nondecorated look," she advises, but she tries to help her clients to avoid over-decoration.

"We are all tired of pretentious decoration," Mrs. House said, illustrating the new look in a living room she decorated recently.

Although the fabrics were not coordinated, they were compatible in an over-all look of casual charm. On a sofa she used a small yellow and blue print, a small French chair wears solid yellow, and a small blue and white check was used for a desk chair. A blue and white palm print by Valentino was another handsome fabric used on a pair of modern armless upholstered chairs.

Seating was defined by a plain square royal blue wool rug with a yellow border, an Edward Fields design. Walls were painted white, windows were left uncovered except for white blinds.

Leif Pedersen, who decorates in the United States and Canada, feels "the cost of space and economy are dictating the current decorating trend. People are living more at home and are in need of a more practical home environment. They want comfortable, useful interiors rather than the purely decorative interiors of a few years ago. The space must count."

Contrived decoration will no longer be in demand, he insists. From now on our lifestyles will influence the decoration of our homes.

Jane Victor, who has been creating interiors for many young married people, believes the new undecorated look calls for fewer furnishings, less ostentation.

"It may even be a rip-off of fashion's poor look. Whatever it is, it will not produce as many stereotypes as the decoration of the '60s. Attractiveness will not be measured by the sum of money spent in decorating a home."

Utilities in bind

America's utility companies, taken for granted for years by investors and consumers alike, are in trouble.

The Edison Electric Institute of New York reports that some 40 major utility companies in the nation have cancelled or deferred plans for $10 billion in capital improvements because of a worsening profit picture.

Utility industry earnings declined more than 15 per cent in the first half of 1974, reports Lehman Brothers, the respected Wall Street firm of analysts. The average utility share has dropped 20 per cent in value since 1968, twice the rate of the stock market as a whole, states Richard Green, president of Missouri Public Service Co. (MPSC).

Without an improvement in this picture, the nation could experience blackouts and economic slowdowns in three to five years, the industry states.

Inflation, a decline in consumer demand, environmental actions, rising fuel costs, over-regulation and—most important—high interests costs are factors listed by the utilities as contributing to their present plight. Higher rates offer the only immediate answer, they state.

Yet the consumer can only stand so much, the main consideration in the Sedalia City Council's protest of pending MPSC rate hikes.

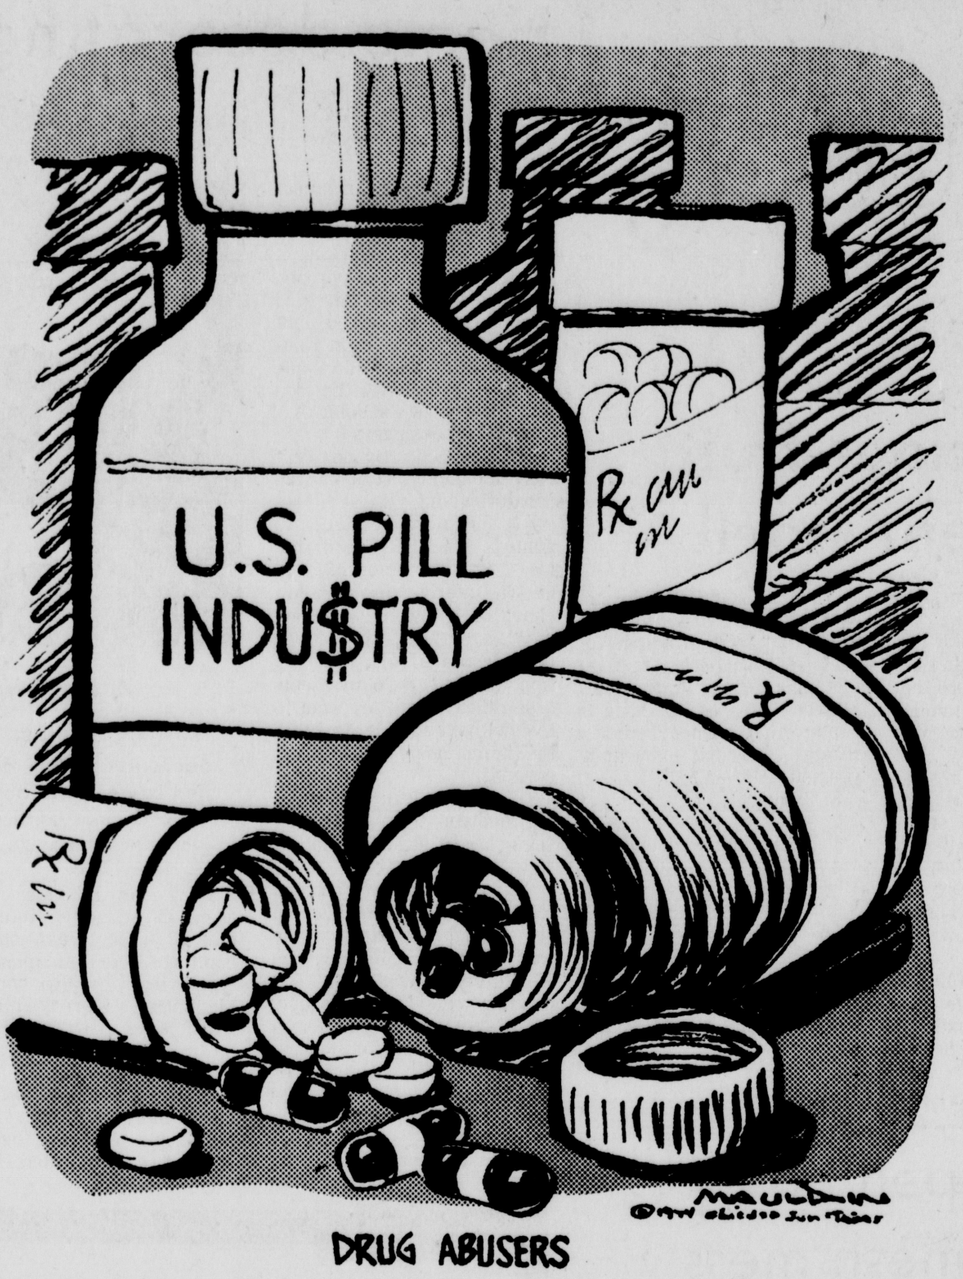

How do we reconcile these opposed forces in time to avert a real calamity?

Leave ERA to states

President and Mrs. Ford have been asked to campaign for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. The President said he would consider the request.

This was after Ford met Friday with the presidents of 19 women's groups. The pro-ERA coalition will zero in on five states this fall in an effort to put the amendment over the top; Missouri will be one.

President Ford would do well to stay out of the ERA issue, lest he further fracture his conservative base. The ERA is now a matter strictly up to the states to decide, so let's leave it to them.

Short prison terms for VIP offenders

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — From inside the McNeil Island penitentiary has come a fascinating insight into the controversy over prison sentences.

The full pardon granted former President Nixon by President Ford has added to the argument. Many Americans contend that Nixon, desite the prima-facie evidence on his own tapes that he participated in the Watergate cover-up, had suffered enough and shouldn't have been sent to prison. Others argue that he should have been subject to the law like any other citizen.

Some of his former associates, who became entangled in the Watergate crimes, have complained that the courts made examples of them. Others point out that ex-Vice President Spiro Agnew and ex-Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst escaped prison sentences for crimes that cost less-favored men their liberty.

Now a McNeil Island convict named Edward Browder has sent us proof that it helps to be a government bigwig, Mafia don, labor leader or White House intimate at sentencing time.

The 57-year-old Browder presented us with a four-inch-thick survey entitled "A Study of White Collar Offenses Involving Politicians, Bankers, Businessmen and the Professional Swindler, Promoter, Labor Union Racketeer, Organized Criminal Offenders."

Browder is good at statistics, as a former manipulator of pilfered stocks. He has also had plenty of time to conduct his survey at McNeil Island where he is serving a 25-year sentence.

Insofar as possible, we checked out his statistical findings with the annual reports of the federal courts. We also consulted a similar survey by federal prosecutors in New York. Browder's figures stand up.

The inmate found that noted white-collar criminals average a little more than two years in prison regardless of how much they steal. About 20 per cent get off with no prison sentence at all through fines, probation or suspended sentences. Many are able to delay cases almost indefinitely, sometimes until they are dropped.

Major Mafia figures and top labor hoodlums get an even kindlier break from the judges. Their prison terms average about two years, with almost 40 per cent getting no prison sentences. Only narcotics sentences are consistenly stiff.

Among the examples cited by Browder was Mafia don Angelo "Gyp" DeCarlo, who drew a 12-year sentence but was freed by President Nixon after only 18 months.

The survey also cites a host of bigwigs who wound up with less than two years or, in some cases, no jail at all. Among them were ex-Rep. John Dowdy, D-Tex.; ex-Rep. Irv Whalley, R-Pa.; New York Democratic leader Carmine DeSapio, financier Louis Wolfson, ex-Army Maj. Gen. Carl Turner and former Nixon figures Herb Kalmbach and Richard Kleindienst.

In one ingenious section of his survey, Browder shows through computations that prominent white-collar defendants average about one year for every $10 million they steal. He also found some $800 million in thefts, stock swindles and other dodges, which have been punished only with fines, probation and suspended sentences.

In contrast, bank robbers who got away with a few thousand dollars averaged 11-year sentences, five times longer in the slammer than bank embezzlers who got away with millions.

Footnote: Browder cites a few exceptions including Billie Sol Estes, the fertilizer king, who did six years, and Tino de Angelis, the salad oil swindler, who served seven. Browder also feels, obviously, that his own 25-year sentence is excessive.

Although his findings are restricted to the federal courts, our sources say that the discrimination in sentences is often worse in state courts.

ROCKEFELLER'S NIECES: The scathingly anti-Nixon movie, "Millhouse: A White House Comedy," was heavily financed by three nieces of Vice President-designate Nelson Rockefeller.

Rockefeller had nothing to do with his nieces' generosity. His brother Laurance's daughter, Laura, ponied up $30,000. And two of David Rockefeller's daughters, Abby and Peggy, gave $5,000 and $2,000 respectively.

The film cost $200,000. So far, the Rockefeller women have gotten back $32,000 of their $37,000 investment.

Although abashed that we had learned of his Rockefeller financing, the producer of "Millouse," Emile de Antonio, reluctantly confirmed that the nieces put up the money. He said he did not want any inference that the money came from the senior Rockefellers.

"As far as I know, it was a totally individual thing," de Antonio said.

His "Millhouse" told in factual, but stinging detail the story of Nixon's climb to power. It so infuriated the White House that the "plumbers" were sicced on de Antonio and an FBI check was run on him.

BAKER'S BOMBSHELL: Bobby Baker, the former Senate aide who went to prison in a celebrated scandal of the early 1960s, has completed more than half of a book that will embarrass some present senators.

Now a successful businessman, Baker insists he isn't writing a cruel book about those who condemned him. Indeed, the book will contain many warm anecdotes about prominent political figures.

But the book will charge that Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., now the Senate's "Mr. Clean," twisted arms for political funds when he was the Republican Senate campaign chairman.

Baker will also chide the present apostle of political reform, Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., for voting consistently against reform in times past.

A conservative view

Death in the line of duty

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Every September brings from the FBI its Uniform Crime Report. The tabulated figures are mutely assembled, row on row, as neatly as troops, as silent as tombstones. With orderly precision they tell of disorder, violence and death. Permit me to speak of one figure only: 127.

Kilpatrick

That is the number of local, county and state law enforcement officers who were slain last year in the line of duty. It was the highest annual figure ever recorded.

Director Clarence Kelly's report is a bloodless, faceless, computerized affair. Every drop of emotion is drained away. No trace of drama remains. Out of the punch-card correlations, certain composite images emerge, but the images do not speak to our senses: We do not hear the shots, or smell the danger, or see faces contorted in fear or rage. We have only the silent tabulations.

Over the past 10 years, 858 officers have died from criminal action. Of these, 613 have died from handguns. For no particular reason that presents itself, Sunday nights are the most dangerous nights, and the hours between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. are the most dangerous hours. Most officers are slain in robbery pursuit or in attempting other arrests. Last year saw 29 officers killed in responding to "disturbance calls." It is a shocking reflection on our violent society that 25 policemen were killed as they made routine traffic stops.

The composite image of the dead officer indicates that he was white (10 per cent were black, 3 per cent other races); that he was in his late twenties or early thirties (median police service, five and one-half years); and that he most probably died on regular patrol duty in his squad car. But of the 127 slain last year, 11 actually were off-duty at the time. They died in the highest tradition of law enforcement, which holds that an officer of the law is never "off duty."

Who were their killers? All but six of last year's killings were cleared by arrest. Of the 192 identified offenders, 77 per cent had prior criminal records, 61 per cent had previously been convicted and released on parole or probation. Sixteen per cent actually were on parole or probation when they were involved in the killing of an officer.

The tabulations march on and on, mutely arithmetical, but no vivid imagination is required to transform the silent facts to flesh and blood: These were 127 men who died in the police service; most of them left widows and children behind. The hard profession of law enforcement demands that officers risk their lives; these 127 risked, and lost.

Some appropriate method should be found, it seems to me, for the living not only to honor these dead but also to honor the profession in which they served. Perhaps a deserved tribute could be arranged if the President annually were to invite to the White House the families of the slain officers, there to receive medals in memoriam. If such a ceremony were held in conjunction with Law Day, the sacrifices implicit in law enforcement might be dramatically emphasized.

Another approach is suggested in a bill sponsored chiefly by Senators John McClellan of Arkansas and Roman Hruska of Nebraska. The bill has passed both House and Senate, in different versions, but has been languishing since last April for want of further action. It would provide for $50,000 memorial stipends to the families of both police and firemen killed by felonious action or by accident in the line of duty.

The McClellan-Hruska bill would cost an estimated $20 million a year. It is a large sum, perhaps unwisely large; the measure might transform an obligation of honor into a bureaucratic indemnity, and it raises questions of federalism that might better be left at rest. But the basic idea has merit. Police officers know little of public honor or respect in life; in some fashion, we ought to honor those who pursued law and found death instead.

The voice from the sleeping bag

WASHINGTON — I was very surprised to read in the newspaper last week that Mrs. Ford said her family was cutting down on their food bills as a way of fighting inflation. The reason why I was surprised was that Mrs. Ford has teen-agers, and there is no way under the sun that you can cut a food budget when you have teen-agers living in the house. It isn't the immediate family that costs money — it's feeding everyone else's children that sends your food costs skyrocketing.

Buchwald

In the past most of us could get away with giving a strange child a glass of milk and a cookie. But in recent years we seem to be sustaining large masses of youth, which I have dubbed, for the want of a better name, the Sleeping Bag Generation.

Last month my grocery bill for a family of four on Martha's Vineyard was $791. This is what happened.

Three sleeping bags showed up at the door. A voice from one of the sleeping bags said, "We're very good friends of your daughter Hilda, and she said we could camp on your property when we got here."

"I have no daughter named Hilda," I said.

"What's her name?" a voice from another sleeping bag asked.

"Jenny."

"That's it," the voice said. "We're good friends of Jenny, and she said we could sleep on your lawn so we won't be arrested and tortured by the police with chains and rubber hoses."

"We won't be any bother," a voice from another sleeping bag said. "We have stale doughnuts for dinner."

I gave permission for them to camp out on the lawn. When my daughter came home I informed her that three of her dearest friends had arrived and set up camp.

"Boys or girls?" Jenny asked.

"How the hell would I know," I replied.

It turns out that sleeping bags require large amounts of nourishment. While those of us who lived in the house could get by on bluefish or eggs, the sleeping bags had to be fed steak, ham, imported cheeses, French bread, butter and a good brand of beer.

Every day my daughter, who never did find out their names, carried down provisions to the sleeping bags. The zippers would open up automatically and they would consume $60 worth of groceries at a feeding.

In exchange for the food, the sleeping bags strummed music on a guitar in our living room while I was trying to watch the evening news.

After the sleeping bags departed, a new group of sleeping bags arrived and said they were friends of my son Edward. I probably would have been nicer except I have no son named Edward. The nearest thing to it was Joel. While it bothered me, it didn't seem to bother Joel. He took all the sleeping bags to Kronig's grocery store where they charged everything to me for a picnic they were holding with some other sleeping bags on the beach.

Now that I'm back in Washington, the sleeping bags are starting to show up here. Many turn out to be friends of the sleeping bags who camped on my property in Martha's Vineyard. If I refuse hospitality for them I am considered an ogre by my children, Hilda and Edward, or whatever their names are. But if I let them spread out on the grass I'm going to get another $800 grocery bill.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Bats are among the few mammals capable of flying. Bats use a process called echolation which aids their orientation in the dark, The World Almanac notes. While flying, they emit supersonic sounds from the nose and mouth which are reflected from an object back to their sensory apparatus. Bats have sight but it is useless in the dark.

Ann Landers

Child beating no problem in China

This is Ann Landers, reporting from The People's Republic of China as a member of the American Medical Association's delegation.

When I asked a group of physicians how they handled the battered child problem, they looked at me quizzically. "What do you mean?" I was asked. I explained that in our country some parents become so angry with their children that they beat them unmercifully and the child must be hospitalized. The doctors were stunned. "We have no such problem here," replied Dr. Woo. "The neighbors wouldn't allow it!"

It became obvious early in our trip that China's major asset is her healthy, bright, highly motivated children. As the twig is bent, so grows the tree, and we saw the skillful manner in which those little twigs were being bent. You can bet the rent their "trees" will grow up straight and strong.

The first school we visited was a nursery for children from three to six years of age. Almost all parents work six days a week, so the children spend only Sundays at home. The cost is about eight American dollars a month for room, board, education, and medical care.

The sleeping quarters were neat as a pin (dormitory style), the classrooms immaculate, the children bright-eyed, well-dressed (no uniforms) and extremely friendly. "Hello Uncles and Aunties," they chanted (in Chinese) as we entered. We were given seats and invited to observe.

"Today, we will sing a song," announced the teacher, an attractive woman who appeared to be about 30. "The song is about a little girl who was sent to the store to buy some eggs. The little girl noticed after she had left the store that the clerk had given her one yaun too much in change. She returned immediately and informed the clerk of his mistake. Chairman Mao tells us it is wrong to take anything that does not belong to us. He says we must always treat others as we would want to be treated." The children sang the song with boundless enthusiasm.

The second lesson was "Pick the Best Solution": "A little boy was on his way to school. He saw three red, juicy apples under a tree. The wind had blown them to the ground. What should he do? Should he keep the apples for himself? Should he take them to school and share them with his friends? Should he leave them there and hope the owner of the tree would find them? Or is there a better solution?"

One little girl about five years old raised her hand and said, "I think the boy should write a note, saying, 'These apples fell from your tree,' and place the note with the apples on the windowsill of the house. He should not sign his name because Chairman Mao says, 'A good deed done in secret has twice the value.'"

"Very fine," the teacher nodded. "Are there any other solutions?"

A small boy raised his hand and spoke up in a voice so loud it startled us. "I think it would be best," he said, "If that boy took the apples to the police. We have been told that when we find something that doesn't belong to us we should give it to the police because that is where people always go when they lose things."

The teacher agreed that his solution was also good. She then asked the children to stand and repeat the moral of the story: "It is wrong to keep anything that does not belong to us. We must do everything we can, no matter how small, to serve the State. Every honest act helps our country and makes Chairman Mao proud of us."

Would I want my grandchildren to be raised in The People's Republic of China? No, I would not. But I wouldn't mind if they could go to school there for a year or two.

Personnel changes discussed

Personnel changes were the primary topics at Monday's evening's regular meeting of the Sedalia Housing Authority.

The mid-August resignation of Don Murray, one of two Authority maintenance personnel, led to the recent hiring of William Hieronymus, 1203 South Garfield. However, the Sept. 1 death of Charles Gray has again put the Authority into a hiring position.

The Rev. Marvin Albright, executive director, was authorized to interview two men concerning the most recent job opening. Formal approval was granted to increasing the foreman's salary to $600 per month while the second maintenance man will in the future receive $550 a month.

After some discussion, the Authority voted to allow a single 24-year-old male veteran student to move into the Anthony Buckner Apartments. The decision runs contrary to normal Authority policy which makes less than middle-aged individuals without families ineligible.

Mr. Albright reported that occupancy of the Authority's 200 units is down seven from last month to 139. He noted however, that "this month is going to look a little bit better."

Initial budget discussion was heard, including items such as salary and benefits increases for personnel, painting, equipment purchases, tree planting and fertilizer application. Mr. Albright was authorized to shop for two new lawnmowers to be used in the near future.

In other business, the Authority instructed Mr. Albright to check with regional Department of Housing and Urban Development officials concerning an October meeting in which several commissioners voiced interest. The meeting is designed to inform public housing officials about new federal regulations and will be held on various dates in several major cities.

Missouri crops reported in fair condition

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Eighty-four per cent of Missouri's corn crop had reached the dough stage by the end of last week, but the crop remained in poor to fair condition, the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says.

The maturation of grain sorghum continued to drag behind last year's pace with 19 per cent of the crop mature compared with 30 per cent a year ago.

Truman project is topic

Speaking about recreational plans for development of the Harry S. Truman Dam and Reservoir project, Ed Elmore, chief Ranger, stated in a slide-talk presentation before the Sedalia Rotary Club at Ramada Inn at noon Monday that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers anticipates four million visitors annually when the dam is completed.

Elmore has been working on recreational plans at the local level in Warsaw for the past 2½ years. The master plan, he stated, for land and water use and facilities development has been in the planning stage for four years and is now in Omaha headquarters for review.

He presented slides showing 45 or more areas of the lake shore to be developed for recreational facilities, including parks, camp sites, boat ramps, picnicking spots, bridle paths, motorcycle trails and major and minor marinas. His presentation included a complex of buildings to be constructed on the Kaysinger Bluff site. It will house the visitor's center. His presentation also included the relocation of roads and bridges to be constructed in the Truman Dam area.

The dam was authorized in 1954 and first funded in 1964, and is now 50 per cent complete and will provide flood control, power and recreation, he stated.

Gerald Seim, September program chairman, arranged for the program and introduced the speaker.

In other business, William Hopkins, club president, named Louis R. Walch as Rotarian of the month of August for his outstanding work on membership and on other Rotary committees.

Tickets for the club-sponsored travelogue series were distributed to the members following an explanation by Larry McRoy, project committee chairman, of the sales organization of 10 teams of eight members each who will vie for an award at the close of the ticket sale Oct. 14.

Aubrey Case, Rotary governor of district 607, inducted two new club members — Larry Melton, executive manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, and Cecil Gilmore, of Pat O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick GMC CCO.

Guests introduced by Verl Schnepf were Richard Abdoler, a Ranger on the Truman Dam project; Mrs. Aubrey Case, a guest of her husband; Mrs. Cecil Gilmore, a guest of the club; and Clyde Bounds, Washington, D.C., a guest of K.U. Love.

Boils: handle them with care

Dear Dr. Lamb — Would you tell me what causes boils? What could I put on them so they would come to a head sooner to relieve the pain?

Dear Reader — Boils are a large pimple. They are caused by the staphylococcal bacteria. We all have these bacteria on our skin. Ordinarily our skin protects us from these bacteria causing an infection. When these baceteria find a break in the skin, as may occur around a hair follicle or an accumulation of excess skin oils and wax, they start an infection. Our defense mechanisms wall off the infection so it can't spread to the rest of the body. As the infection is limited it destroys only a spot of tissue. The germs can't migrate, so they are in the destroyed tissue or die. This infected and destroyed tissue is the "pus" that comes out of the boil.

You shouldn't apply pressure to such a localized infection, in part because you can break down the wall of tissue and cells constructed to limit the infection to that area. But, you can apply a warm or hot towel and soak it. This speeds up the process, and it softens the hard skin over the infected area. If it is large you should let your doctor drain it. He won't drain it, though, until the infection has been walled off by your body's defenses.

Anyone who has recurrent boils should have a good medical examination. It may mean you have a lowered resistance to infection as can occur with diabetes.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Recently I had a gall bladder operation, and my doctor discovered I had a badly damaged liver. This wasn't caused by the gall bladder. He said from the condition of the liver I had had this a long time. I was flabbergasted. I always thought only drinkers got this. I'm no drinker, all I ever did drink was plain soda at social gatherings. I dislike any kind of liquor. I did have a very difficult childbirth years ago. Could I have damaged my liver then?

I know a liver could never be replaced or repaired, but what can be done to keep it from giving me any problems in the future? My doctor says vitamins with iron each day and plenty of proteins, a well balanced meal. Anything else?

Dear Reader — There is a widespread misconception that all cases of cirrhosis of the liver are caused by drinking too much. Cirrhosis is a scarring process that destroys a certain amount of liver cells. These are replaced by non-functioning fiberous tissue.

No one knows why or when you developed cirrhosis. Some cases are the result of old viral hepatitis. Others are caused from inflammation of the bile tract or obstruction of the bile tract. You can even develop cirrhosis of the liver from longstanding heart failure. Fluid collects in the liver and causes this.

Treatment is general, as your doctor has said, particularly as long as you have no symptoms. If you have evidence of poor absorption from your digestive tract then you have a greater need for the increased intake of vitamins. In your case it isn't important, but for those who do use alcohol, they should stop this entirely if there is any liver damage. (NEA)

Power line contact severely burns man

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Grady Smith, 35, Nixa, Mo., was in critical condition with third-degree burns after coming in contact with a 69,000-volt power line while working at the Dayco Rubber Plant in the southwest part of Springfield.

Smith was taken to St. John's Mercy Hospital in St. Louis Monday night.

An estimated 14.3 million futures contracts worth $181 billion were traded on regulated commodity exchanges in 1972.

No known precedent on trial despite a pardon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leading Supreme Court case on presidential pardons suggests that Richard M. Nixon, although pardoned by President Ford, could still be tried and even convicted in the Watergate case but could never be punished.

Both the Constitution and the court decisions on the subject acknowledge a President's broad powers of pardon in all cases except impeachment but treat the punishment and not the trial and conviction.

An 1867 Supreme Court decision, written by Justice Stephen J. Field, is the guiding law on the scope and effect of a presidential pardon and recognizes a President's right to grant one either before or after conviction. The case was titled Ex Parte Garland.

In discussing a pardon before conviction and the situation which would arise after conviction, Field clearly raised the possibility of trying someone who could not be punished.

Field wrote, "If granted before conviction, it prevents any of the penalties and disabilities consequent upon conviction from attaching (thereto)."

The decision spoke only of the penalties and not the trial, and nothing in this or other court rulings appears to bar the judicial process leading up to the point of punishment.

There are no known cases, however, of a person having been pardoned and then tried anyway. Prosecution traditionally has been dismissed at that point as moot.

Also, the principle that a pardon spares only the punishment and not the side effects of the judicial process is found in a 1914 Supreme Court decision upholding the conviction of a New York man as a second offender.

Although a presidential pardon had prevented any punishment for the first offense, the court said the conviction and its legal implications were not wiped out by the pardon.

A penalty-free trial would appear to be one of the last avenues for publicly resolving the question of whether Nixon had committed any illegal actions.

Impeachment also remains a legitimate route to that end even now, but past Congresses had been averse to using it once the official involved has left office. And House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., has said he will not reopen the Nixon impeachment case.

Officials 'misled' TerHorst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential Press Secretary Jerald F. terHorst says he was misled by other White House officials about Richard M. Nixon's pardon. But he insists that the misinformation was not the basic reason for his resignation.

TerHorst said Monday that he would have resigned in any event because he disagreed with President Ford's decision to pardon former President Nixon of any federal crime he may have committed while chief executive.

"It was something which my conscience wouldn't accept," said terHorst, who will return to work for the Detroit News as a columnist.

TerHorst wasn't informed of Ford's decision on Nixon until Saturday. Before then, he unknowingly misled reporters concerned with the story.

David Kraslow, Washington bureau chief for Cox Newspapers, said he stopped working on a story about discussions between the White House and Nixon over a possible pardon when terHorst assured him Friday it was not true.

Kraslow said he received a call from terHorst shortly before the pardon was announced on Sunday. "I'm sorry, Dave. If I had known on Friday what I know now I would not have guided you away from that story," Kraslow quoted terHorst as saying.

Civil service appointments 'pattern' found in probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional investigator says alleged improprieties in the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration may be part of a wholesale subversion of civil service regulations.

"We know the Nixon administration had an avowed aim" of controlling the civil service machinery by placing loyalists in high-level career positions in possible violation of federal regulations, said Frank Silbey, an investigator on the staff of Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif.

He noted that the Civil Service Commission has found evidence of such practices at the General Services Administration and the Social and Rehabilitation Service.

The commission has investigated similar allegations at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the State Department, the Small Business Administration and several other agencies, but has refused to disclose the findings, Silbey said.

"We have a wholesale pattern which seems to have emerged, a very ominous pattern" of patronage appointments throughout government, he said.

Moss has asked Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe for a Justice Department review of "the activities uncovered (at the Social and Rehabilitation Service) with a view to bringing possible criminal charges."

Silbey said Moss has received no Justice Department response. Department officials could not determine the status of the request on Monday.

Silbey said "inside sources" at LEAA have complained of similar patronage improprieties within the crime-fighting agency, which spends nearly $1 billion a year for research and state and local anticrime projects. Silbey declined to identify his sources.

The allegations prompted Moss to request investigations by the General Accounting Office and the Civil Service Commission.

Meantime, the Justice Department began investigating the allegations Monday at the request of the new LEAA administrator, Richard W. Velde.

Investigators are examining whether regulations designed to give career workers a fair chance at promotions were bypassed in order to fill top-level jobs with outsiders chosen for political reasons, said O.T. Berkman Jr., a Justice Department official familiar with the probe, and other officials.

Says hard times are indicated

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rising unemployment, shortages of key materials, a stagnant home-building industry and continuing inflation point to hard times, Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., told the convention of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The delegates were to hear Tuesday from AFL-CIO president George Meany, Bryce S. Mackasey, postmaster general of Canada and Robert W. Sarnoff, chairman and chief executive officer of RCA Corporation.

Eagleton told the IBEW's 3,500 delegates Monday Congress should cut the proposed $30 billion federal budget. He called attention to the foreign aid proposal for $8.4 billion, which he termed "silly."

"There was a time when the humanitarian thing to do was to help countries that were destroyed in the war or that needed our help in getting on their own two feet," the senator said. "But foreign aid doesn't buy us friends. It never will."

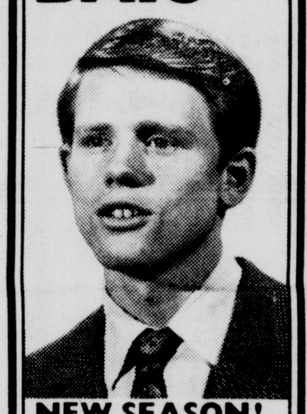

Winter fuel needs are being surveyed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A survey to determine the types and quantities of fuel required by Missouri industries this winter has been undertaken by the state Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

"We hope to begin receiving completed questionaires and tabulating them within the week," said division chief Guy Jaffe Monday. "The final results should be compiled by the first part of October."

Information on industrial needs for electricity, natural gas, propane, coal, middle distilates and residual fuel oils will be gathered through the survey, requested by the Federal Energy Administration, which is responsible for fuel allocation.

Connors, Ms. King reign as Open champs

Belleville's Jimmy Connors ...
...forever hold your banner high

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Billie Jean King took entirely different routes to the winner's circle in wresting U.S. Open tennis championships from Australian players.

"It was the best tennis I've ever played in my life ... I did everything well. I think that's what it takes to beat Ken Rosewall," said Connors.

"I really thought Evonne was going to win there for a while. Until the last point, to be exact," said Ms. King.

Connors whipped the two-time Open winner from Australia, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1 Monday in the most lopsided men's final in the 93-year history of the grass court classic. Ms. King won her fourth trophy in an erratic comeback over Australian Evonne Goolagong, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The victories were worth $22,500 apiece and marked the first sweep by Americans since Stan Smith and Ms. King won in 1971.

Australians John Newcombe and Margaret Court took the titles last year. Newcombe bowed to Rosewall in the semi-finals Sunday, and Mrs. Court remained in Australia to await the birth of her second child.

Connors, the 22-year-old lefthander, said he started the day so eager that it scared him.

"I was so high," he said, "that at one point I was afraid I'd come down. I tried to stay calm. I could feel my heart beating in my shirt."

Rosewall, at 39, is recognized as the classic player in the game, but Connors established himself as the current king of tennis He won 11 straight games and took only one hour, eight minutes to win his third major title of the year and increase his season earnings to nearly $200,000.

Miss Goolagong, who at 23 was seeking her first U.S. Open crown, had turned back a determined top-seeded Chris Evert in a resumed semifinal match. But she was not so fortunate against the seasoned 30-year-old Ms. King.

"I wasn't sure I was going to play well after yesterday's match," Miss Goolagong said. "I was afraid it would be a big letdown, but I knew I was playing against an experienced player."

"I was in a daze out there during the last set," said Ms. King. "I was really lucky. I just said 'stay in there.'"

She did and won the match game at love.

"That is why I can't understand why people call her the old lady," said Evonne. "She certainly doesn't play like it."

Oakland dumps Royals twice

OAKLAND (AP) — The bells were ringing for the Oakland A's and tolling for the Kansas City Royals.

"It sounded great," Gene Tenace said after a 3-0, 7-0 doubleheader sweep of the Royals—on well-matched shutouts by Vida Blue and Jim "Catfish" Hunter—before a bell-ringing crowd of 47,780 paid.

The A's said the total crowd numbered 51,185, an all-time Oakland record, because each season ticket holder was sent a complimentary ticket. It was the team's ninth half-price Family Night of the baseball season and also "Double-Dinger" night, with all fans urged to bring bells to the ballpark.

"The atmosphere in the dugout was a little different. There was a lot of enthusiasm," said Tenace, who caught Blue's two-hitter and belted a ... in the opener.

But shortstop Bert Campaneris, who had four hits in the doubleheader to raise his batting average to .298, declared, "We can win before big crowds or little crowds. With that kind of pitching, we'd win anytime."

Hunter hurled a four-hitter, his second straight, in the nightcap for his 23rd victory, tops in the major leagues. Sal Bando and Joe Rudi had "dingers"—the A's clubhouse term for home runs—to provide him with more than enough runs.

The sweep came after a three-game losing streak and increased the A's lead over second place Texas to 6½ games in the American League West. Their pennant-clinching magic number—combined number of Oakland victories and Texas losses needed—has shrunk to 13.

Kansas City, considered the A's main challenger two weeks ago, has lost 13 of its last 15 games to drop 11 games back and virtually out of the race.

"We just aren't hitting," said Royals' Manager Jack McKeon. "When you don't hit, a lot of other things look bad. We wasted two pretty good pitching efforts."

Blue, 15-14, snapped a personal five-game losing streak and Tenace described the left-hander as "overpowering with his fastball."

Blue struck out seven and walked two, polishing off the Royals in 2 hours, 10 minutes. Hunter issued no walks and struck out two, wrapping up his sixth shutout of the season in 2:04.

"I had real good control, and I got excited because of all those people," said Hunter.

Kansas City places 14 on waivers, trade West

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs had to trim 15 more players from their roster today to get down to the 47-player limit in the National Football League.

The Chiefs placed 14 players on waivers Monday, including two 1974 draft selections, defensive lineman LeRoy Hegge, Number 7, and offensive guard Frank Pomarico, Number 14.

Others cut from the offensive unit were punter LeRoy Clark of Prairie View A&M, wide receivers Ted Covington of San Fernado Valley State and Craig Clark of Utah State, center Mike McDaniel of Kansas and guard Bill Story of Southern Illinois.

Seven others were waived from the defense, cornerbacks Charles McTorry of Tennessee State and William Florence of Louisville, linebackers Oliver Nicholson of Texas Southern and Larry Allen of Illinois, end Scott Lewis of Grambling and backs Perry Pruett and Tom Gipson.

The Chiefs also announced the trade of Robert West, a wide receiver, to the San Francisco 49ers for an undisclosed draft choice.

Big Eight briefings

CU faces tough test with LSU

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Colorado Coach Bill Mallory predicted Monday that the Buffaloes will have to play good, sound, aggressive football for 60 minutes to beat Louisiana State.

The Buffs travel to LSU Saturday night.

"Our people are in the right frame of mind," Mallory said during the season's first Big Eight Conference telephone briefing session. "We're not gonna run scared against LSU. I think LSU is probably as good as they've been in the last few years. We have respect for their defense. We have respect for their offense."

Top-ranked Oklahoma, preparing to host Baylor Saturday, expects to be as good or better on offense than in 1973, Coach Barry Switzer said.

Apparently, too, the Sooners aren't sweating over the loss of star fullback Waymon Clark, who was kicked off the squad at the start of the practice season. Jim Littrell has replaced Clark, and Switzer said:

"I think Littrell will be one of the surprises for us."

Switzer expressed some concern about the mental attitude of the Sooners.

"People keep saying how good we are," Switzer explained. "We've been getting a lot of publicity. I'm happy to win a ball game 7-6. People think we ought to beat teams by four or five touchdowns. Of course, it's better to be picked No. 1 than 101.

"The Baylor game is one which might be decided in the fourth quarter."

Coach Tom Osborne said Nebraska is concerned about Oregon, the Huskers' foe Saturday at Lincoln, Neb. "Oregon has one of the top two or three defensive clubs we'll face all season."

Osborne has decided he will start John O'Leary at I-back and Don Westbrook at wingback. The Husker coach also said Ritch Bahe would be tried at two positions, wingback and split end.

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio had expected to see the Tigers' opening foe, Mississippi, in action last week but the Rebels' game with Tulane had to be canceled because of the hurricane. Missouri travels to Mississippi Saturday night.

"I'm afraid we don't know a lot about Mississippi," said Onofrio. "We do know they ran over Tennessee last year."

Don Fambrough, the Kansas coach, said the Jayhawks are "in pretty good shape" for Saturday night's invasion of Washington State. "Our progress on offense has to be the thing I'm most pleased with.

"I'm also very much pleased with the work of Scott McDaniel (Kansas' sophomore quarterback). He has poise and the ability to make decisions.

"Washington State is always a tough team. Playing them out there in their own backyard for the first time, they'll want to do well. And we're not accustomed to night games."

Defensive coordinator Lance Van Zandt, subbing for Coach Jim Stanley at Oklahoma State, asserted the Cowboys' offense is "really improved. We've got seven or eight running backs who can really go, and our opponents can expect us to throw the ball more this season."

The Cowboys, with sophomore Charlie Weatherbie at quarterback, plays Wichita State Saturday at Stillwater, Okla.

Coach Earle Bruce of Iowa State described the Cyclones' game at Texas Tech Saturday night as "one of the toughest openers Iowa State has ever faced. I hope we're as tough for them as they are for us."

Bruce said the Cyclones had a vastly improved secondary and that the team is "looking forward to our opening game. I guess we'll know Saturday how much we're improved."

Describes hopes if bid fails

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Julian Bond claims that the Democratic party is in turmoil and says that if he does not win the party's presidential nomination in 1976 he hopes at least to have bargaining power to influence the naming of a standard bearer.

"I don't think you can run without being serious about it," the black politician said in an interview of his aspirations for the presidency.

However, Bond, at 34, an urbane, articulate legislator and professional lecturer, also is a political realist.

Asked what he will have accomplished if he runs for the nomination and does not win, he replied:

"If everything goes the way I would hope it goes, I would arrive at the Democratic convention in '76 with a sizeable bloc of the delegates pledged to me.

"And let's say the candidates are Jimmy Carter (Georgia's governor), Scoop Jackson, Teddy Kennedy, George Wallace. I would say to them — all of them — I have a set of principles here and they're not abstract, they're very real and very concrete.

"And if you want these delegates, you must agree to this set of principles and whichever one of you does can have these votes."

He defined the principles as the same 30-odd proposals the black congressional caucus made to President Nixon in 1971.

Bond said he would want a pledge that the candidate would work for higher black education, "do certain things in foreign policy toward black Africa and insure that the war on poverty not only continues but is strengthened...."

He said blacks have had no consistent way to exert pressure on the national party apparatus.

St. Louis Cardinals' speedster Lou Brock is called out in a sixth-inning attempt to tie Maury Wills' single-season stolen base record of 104 Monday night against the Phillies. Brock reached safely only once in the 2-0 setback. That came on a walk.

Phillies shutout Brock, Cards 2-0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies say Lou Brock's got plenty of time, and the St. Louis Cardinals agree.

"Why, he's only one away," observed Dave Cash, who tagged out Brock on an attempt to tie Maury Wills' record 104th stolen base in a 2-0 Phils triumph Monday night.

"He can wait until almost the last week of the season to do it," Cash insisted. And the veteran Brock concurred.

Brock, nailed by Bob Boone's throw in the sixth inning, emerged unruffled and noted, "I said I'd like to get the record at home and I've got until Oct. 2 to do it.

"I'm not going to put any undue pressure on myself," emphasized the 35-year-old outfielder, who is primed also for a National League career record 739th theft.

"I'll tell you right now that Dick Ruthven has a good pickoff move to first," he added in reference to a Phils right-hander the Cards will face in the finale of a home stand tonight.

Another right-hander, Jim Lonborg, took little credit, however, for keeping Brock's dash short of its objective Monday night.

"I think he knew that I take a long time to get the ball to the plate," noted Lonborg, 15-11, who pitched a two-hitter, "and I don't think he cares what my tempo is.

"Mike Schmidt had come up and said to get the ball to the plate quick and I think he was gone as soon as I threw a fast ball."

A Busch Stadium crowd of 27,801 roared as Brock took off, but the inveterate fans' favorite stumbled on his second step.

"Uusually when he stumbles like that he goes back," commented Cash. "I tagged him high, but I think Lou knew he was out."

Brock had no ready explanation for his failure to return but did note philosophically, "it's not the first time I've slipped and it probably won't be the last."

One of only four Card baserunners, Brock walked before he was thrown out as the Phils clung to a 1-0 lead on Jerry Martin's first major league hit, a second-inning single.

Schmidt doubled and rode home on Mike Anderson's single in the eighth, then Lonborg thwarted a minor Cards threat the same inning.

"I'm going back to my curve ball, which is something I hadn't through most of the year," he said. "I had been favoring the slider, but I think the curve in a lot of instances is better."

Lonborg said his only scare was a lengthy drive off the bat of Reggie Smith which carried right fielder Anderson to the wall in the seventh.

"I thought it was gone," the tall pitcher admitted. "I was kicking at the resin bag. I didn't even see Anderson make the catch.

"I heard the crowd groan and then I knew I was a winner," said the 32-year-old Lonborg.

Battle takes its toll

Irish grind out 31-7 victory over Ga. Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Ara Parseghian called it "a test for us to see how much damage was done through all our losses."

His Notre Dame team, reeling from the loss of eight potential starters, survived the test Monday night with a 31-7 nationally televised football victory over Georgia Tech, but lost two more front line players in the process.

Running back Art Best was sidelined with a broken jaw and linebacker Sherman Smith left with torn ligaments in his left knee as problems continued to mount for the defending national collegiate champions.

Despite it all, Parseghian said, "I think we're going to be a pretty solid team. We'll get better as the season progresses."

The Irish, ranked No. 3 in The Associated Press preseason poll, were forced into a comeback role when Tech methodically marched 68 yards to score after the opening kickoff.

Notre Dame cashed in a fumble recovery at the 14 for the tying touchdown, went ahead on freshman Dave Reeve's 22-yard field goal and established control with a goal line stand that closed the door on Tech's last chance to regain the lead.

Tom Clements, a brilliant quarterback, then picked apart Tech's secondary with six pass completions for 83 yards in a drive that produced a touchdown in the final minute of the half for a 17-7 Irish lead.

Notre Dame spoiled the coaching debut of Pepper Rodgers, who left UCLA last year to return to Tech, where he once played quarterback.

Rodgers had said earlier that Tech "didn't build its football reputation by beating Notre Dame." He said Monday night, "They're too good for us. I didn't schedule them. I never would have."

After Tech's 7-0 lead on an eight-yard scoring pass from Rudy Allen to Jimmy Robinson, Notre Dame drew even when Wayne Bullock slashed over from the two following a fumble recovery at the Jacket 14.

The Irish jumped ahead 10-7 on Reeve's field goal eight seconds after the second period began, and got the padded lead they needed on Clements' seven-yard scoring toss to Pete Demmerle late in the half.

Bullock got another touchdown on a one-yard plunge following a fumble recovery at Tech's 22 and Al Samuel capped an 80-yard fourth period march with an eight-yard scoring run.

Johnson to Yanks

BOSTON — The New Yankees acquired outfielder Alex Johnson from the American League's Texas Rangers on waivers.

Chiefs too old?

AFC Western nod to Raiders, Broncs

This season the American Football Conference Western Division is expected to be a two-horse race between the Oakland Raiders and the Denver Broncos.

The Kansas City Chiefs, who used to win or place in this race, have finished out of the playoff money since 1971. This year, their veterans may be a little wiser, but also a big year older.

Oakland Raiders

The Raiders, after their seventh division flag in eight years, have three quarterbacks to get them there. But one is moving on to the World Football League in 1976, the second is moving on to the WFL in 1975 and the third is moving on in years.

Ken Stabler is leaving Oakland for the Birmingham Americans in 1976. Daryl Lamonica will play with the WFL football a year sooner. And George Blanda will cross off his 47th birthday during this season.

Blanda's age is really not a factor anymore because he's basically a place kicker now, and a very competent one. However, the defections of the other two could cause some morale problems.

There will be no hard feelings, however, if Stabler can duplicate last season's statistics. The Oakland left-hander completed an amazing 62.6 percent of his passes and threw for 14 touchdowns, winding up as the AFC's leading passer. He surrendered only 10 interceptions.

Wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff was fourth in the conference with 48 catches and 660 yards. Mike Siani, at the other wide receiver spot, grabbed 45 passes for 742 yards and tight end Bob Moore rang up 34 receptions for 375 yards.

Marv Hubbard, who bulled his way past the 900-yard barrier in 1973, and the speedier Charlie Smith and Clarence Davis, who combined for over 1,200 yards, are excellent alternatives to the pass.

The Raider defense, which allowed the fewest points in the club's history in 1973, may get a boost from Bubba Smith, former All-Pro end who was sidelined much of last year with a knee injury. Smith showed he is regaining speed when, in preseason play, he blocked one conversion kick by Philadelphia's Tom Dempsey and deflected another.

Denver Broncos

Denver Coach John Raltson concedes Oakland was the division's best club in 1973, with his team only four points behind.

"The Raiders are still our measuring stick of excellence in the AFC West," said Ralston, "and they were just four points better than us in two games. Those four points put them into the playoffs instead of us."

Ralston thinks this year he has found those four points and then some.

"There's no question in our minds that we have the people on the 1974 squad to go all the way," said Ralston.

The people Ralston is talking about go by the names of Johnson, Moses, Odoms and Little, to list a few.

Charlie Johnson is 38 years old and a 13-year veteran, which means he knows a thing or two. However, Johnson, who completed 184 of 346 passes with 20 touchdown tosses, underwent postseason knee surgery.

Tight end Riley Odoms led Denver with 43 catches, good for 629 yards and seven touchdowns. Deep threat Haven Moses caught 28 passes, eight for touchdowns.

Floyd Little was a threat coming out of the backfield with the ball or as a would-be pass receiver. Little rushed for 979 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Ralston picked Ohio State's Randy Gradishar to plug a leak at the linebacker position and off his preseason play against the Falcons Sunday night, the Broncos came up with a winner. All-Pro tackle Paul Smith and defensive end Lyle Alzado are strong pass rushers.

Kansas City Chiefs

Birthdays are not cause for celebration in the Kansas City camp.

The Denver Broncos caught up with the Chiefs, 7-5-2, last year. Age however, has been creeping up on the Chiefs for several seasons.

The Chiefs managed 231 points last year, third worst in the conference. At 39, Lenny Dawson doesn't seem to have any more magic in his arm. He's still listed as Kansas City's top quarterback, even though he missed eight games last season with an assortment of nagging injuries.

Reserves Mike Livingston and Pete Beathard are not the kind of quarterbacks who lead teams into the Super Bowl. And although rookie David Jaynes might be, it takes NFL quarterbacks three or four seasons to learn the ropes.

Ed Podolak was a workhorse in the Kansas City backfield, gaining 721 yards on the ground and catching 55 passes for another 445 yards. Fullback Willie Ellison rushed for 411 yards.

Rookie speedster Woodie Green, the Chiefs' No. 1 draft choice from Arizona State, cracked his collarbone in a preseason game.

Otis Taylor, once one of the league's most dangerous long-ball threats, has apparently lost a couple of big steps. He caught 34 passes for 565 yards and four touchdowns last year.

The Kansas City defense, ranked fourth in the NFL, has kept up with the times, however.

The front four of Marvin Upshaw, Curley Culp, Buck Buchanan and Wilbur Young is still a repected a bunch as is the linebacking crew of Bobby Bell, Willie Lanier and Jim Lynch.

San Diego Chargers

The San Diego Chargers last year had an offense ranked 19th in the NFL, a defense that was rated 22nd and a football team that was wrecked by charges of widespread drug usage.

Aging quarterback Johnny Unitas has traded in his hightop shoes for a broadcasting seat in the press box. That puts the pressure on second-year pro Dan Fouts and rookie Jesse Freitas.

Fullback Cid Edwards rushed for 609 yards last year in 133 carries. He also was second in receiving on the club with 25 catches worth 164 yards.

Robert Holmes had 289 yards and seven touchdowns.

Jerry LeVias heads the receiving crew with 30 receptions for 526 yards. Tight end Pettis Norman and No. 2 wide receiver Gary Garrison contributed just 27 more receptions between them.

Manager 'saves' Foreman for Ali

PLEASANTON, Calif. (AP) — Heavyweight champion George Foreman broke camp without breaking any heads.

"He's coming around good. He's in great shape, but I'd like to see him punching more," said Henry Clark, one of Foreman's sparring partners, after the final workout here Monday.

"He's mostly just been playing with us," added Clark, himself a ranking heavyweight. "When George is really punching, he's knocking people out."

Foreman's manager, Dick Sadler, had an answer: "I'm saving him for Muhammad Ali. Our last fight, we started with six sparring partners and ended up with just two because George wore them out."

The champion and his party of 20 were scheduled to fly from San Francisco today, stopping in Chicago to transfer to a flight to Paris. Foreman will resume training Thursday in Kinhasa, Zaire, site of his Sept. 24 title fight against Muhammad Ali.

Foreman left here weighing about 230 pounds, and Sadler predicted he'd weigh 225 or less Sept. 24.

The championship fight is scheduled at 3 a.m. Zaire time, which will somewhat beat the equatorial heat of Africa and put it in prime time for U.S. theater television showings.

Clark, from Sacramento, Calif., and heavyweight Frank Steele of Gary, Ind., are Foreman sparring partners now and both have worked with Ali in the past.

"The only way Ali can beat him is to move fast for 15 rounds, and I don't think he can do that anymore. George's big advantage is power," said Steele.

"I've worked more than 300 rounds with Ali, and he's a good friend," said Clark. "But I don't think he'll last more than five rounds.

Deadline nears for touch footbal

The registration deadline for signing up for the park and recreation department's six-man touch football league this fall is 5 p.m. Wednesday, according to an announcement by city recreation director Roscoe Righter.

The registration deadline is both for teams as well as individuals wishing to play in the league.

Persons may register by phone between 8 a.m.-noon to 1-5 p.m. by calling 826-4930, or by going to the recreation office in Convention Hall in Liberty Park.

The league is scheduled to begin play Sunday afternoon.

There is one principle of expert bidding that all bridge players should learn. That principle is that an unnecessary bid on the way to game always suggests a slam.

Thus South's four-club bid suggests slam possibilities. It risks nothing since it does not go past four spades. North's four diamonds says, "If you are interested, so am I."

South's four-heart bid shows further interest while still keeping below four spades. At this point if North signs off at four spades, South will pass.

Maybe North should sign off. Most players would, but our North is optimistic. He sees very good trumps and a singleton club and decides to risk something by a five-club bid.

This makes it easy for South to bid the slam. His partner has clearly shown the diamond ace and second-round club control. He has also jumped in spades and gone past game. He must have good trumps. The slam should be a cinch. South bids it and is right.

Strung out

Nobody could ask for better working conditions than Ernst Zimmerman, whose paint studio in the sky boasts the most powerful view over Hamburg, West Germany, and is air conditioned to boot. Zimmerman has the job of painting all 96 of the suspension cables on the Roehlbrand Bridge in Hamburg, to be opened soon to public traffic. (AP Wirehoto)

Retired engineer is headed for priesthood

LONDON (AP) — Nigel Bourne is on his way to becoming a Roman Catholic priest. He's 67.

The retired English civil engineer says there is nothing extraordinary about it and that some even older men are studying for the priesthood. The college they go to is the Beda in Rome, which specializes in training older vocations. Beda students must be at least 24-25 years old and they normally have had other careers.

Bourne chatted between sessions of the convention here of Serra, the Chicago-based international organization of Roman Catholic laity that fosters recruiting for the priesthood. Bourne was ordained a deacon at the closing session. He hopes to be ordained a priest in Rome next Easter Monday.

He has had four children who have given him 18 grandchildren. A much-traveled man, he has worked in Malaysia, Singapore and Borneo on construction projects and was in Spain during the Civil War before World War II. He speaks fluent Spanish.

He lost his wife nine years ago when he was 58. He worked for two more years and then retired. He said:

"I had been doing voluntary work for Serra and I started to think I might recruit myself. I thought 'I have the experience which can be useful in helping people to try to get through this world.' Bishop Charles Grant of Northampton agreed to take me on. After my final ordination I will be assistant to a priest, who will certainly be younger than me. After that I hope to get a country parish for my old age. I have sold my flat in London and I will go where the Church sends me."

Bourne has spent three years at the Beda College, founded in 1852, and he will stay there until next Easter. Older men have to cram into four years the six-year course which is the minimum for young aspirants to the priesthood. The first two years they study philosophy and theology and the last two theology only. These subjects embrace liturgy, which is the form of worship; dogmatic theology, which is what theologians find out in their research and which is based on biblical studies; and homiletics, how to preach.

The Serra organization, founded in Seattle, Wash., in 1934 by a group of businessmen, is named after the Franciscan missionary from Majorca, Father Junipero Serra, who travelled to Mexico with Spanish troops in 1769 and evangelized California. Serra today has 330 clubs in 32 countries.

In ranks

Airman James L. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard K. Taylor, Sweet Springs, has graduated at Keesler AFB, Miss., from the U.S. Air Force electronic computer systems repairman course conducted by the Air Training Command.

Airman Taylor, now trained in the inspection, operation and maintenance of electronic computers and associated aerospace ground equipment, is being assigned to Offutt AFB, Neb., for duty with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

He is a 1973 graduate of Sweet Springs R-7 High School.

Brock's effort nets NL award

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In hot pursuit of Maury Wills' 12-year-old stolen base mark, the St. Louis Cardinals' Lou Brock was named Monday the National League's Player of the Month.

Brock now stands one short of tying Wills' record of 104 steals. In August, Brock set an unofficial record of 29 stolen bases in one month. Brock calls it his "one-a-day diet."

Simmons named player of week

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ted Simmons' hot bat garnered the St. Louis Cardinals' catcher National League Player of the Week honors today for the second time this baseball season.

Simmons hit .455 with five RBI as the Cards won five of six games last week. Half of Simmons' hits were doubles.

He ended the week with an eight-game hitting streak.

Pardon reaction is continuing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A National Committee to Impeach President Ford is being formed in California, two Ohio ministers have called for a special presidential election and an estimated 2,000 persons demonstrated in Wisconsin.

The moves came as continuing reaction to President Ford's full pardon for former President Richard M. Nixon for federal crimes he may have committed while chief executive.

In North Dakota, a county judge freed two men he had sentenced to jail as an act of clemency "in response to the pardon given Richard Nixon by Gerald Ford...."

Judge Kirk Smith said in open court at Grand Forks that "it is the intention of this court to commute any unserved jail time and unpaid fines in the above cases and they are therefore set free."

John L. Smith, 29, Manvel, N.D., was released with 50 days to go on a 75-day sentence for driving while under the influence of alcohol and failing to appear in court. He also escaped a $225 fine.

Also set free was John M. Kleinsasser, 20, of Grand Forks, who had three days to go on a 15-day sentence for a traffic violation.

Judge Smith said he took the action as a personal response to the Ford pardon, "not in agreement or as an opposition."

Ex-prisoner Smith's reaction:

"It's lucky for us there's good old President Ford."

2—Cards of Thanks

IN LOVING MEMORY OF IRA H. MOORE, who passed away September 10, 1973.

We miss you more than anyone knows,

The gates of memory will never close.

Gone are the days we used to share,

But in our hearts you are always there.

We ask Our Blessed Savior in His own supreme Sacrifice, May we find strength in your resignation to God's Will and the hope of future reunion.

Sadly missed by Wife, Children, Grandchildren, Brother and Sister.

WE WISH TO EXPRESS OUR sincere thanks to each and everyone for all acts of kindness and sympathy shown us after the death of our Dad. God Bless you all.
